CODE OF ETHICS

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1. The dentist should be ever ready to respond to the reasonable wants of his patrons, and should fully recognize the obligations involved in his duties toward them. As in many cases they are unable to comprehend the operation or service performed, or to correctly estimate its value, the practitioner must be guided by his own sense of right in treating the case as his superior knowledge dictates. His manner should be gentle and sympathetic, and yet sufficiently firm to enable him to secure the best results of his skill. He should gain the confidence of his patrons, not alone by the skillful performance of difficult operations, but also by attending carefully and conscientiously to the simpler cases committed to his care.

Section 2. The dentist, without being obtrusive or pedantic, should impart such information to his patrons as his opportunities afford him in regard to the causes and nature of the disease in the teeth, or adjacent parts, which he may be called upon to treat; and should explain to them the importance of availing themselves of such timely preventives or remedies as he may deem necessary to their welfare. He should also communicate such general information as shall enable him to exercise an intelligent appreciation of what the profession aims to accomplish.

SECTION 3. The dentist should be temperate in all things, keeping both mind and body in the best possible health, that his patients may have the benefit of that clearness of judgment and skill which they have a right to expect.

ARTICLE II.

SECTION 1. Every member of the dental profession is bound, as such, to maintain the honor and integrity of the profession. To this end, he himself should be upright and courteous in his intercourse with the public and with his brethren in the profession.

SECTION 2. It is unprofessional to resort to public advertisements, such as cards, handbills, posters, or signs, calling attention to peculiar styles of work, prices for services, special modes of operating, or to claim superiority over neighboring practitioners; to publish reports of cases or certificates in the public prints; to go from house to house soliciting or performing operations; to circulate or recommend nostrums, or to perform any other similar acts. But nothing in this section shall be so construed as to imply that it is unprofessional for a dentist to announce in the public prints, or by card, simply his name, occupation and place of business; in the same manner to announce his removal, absence from, or return to business; or to issue to his patients appointment cards, with a fee bill for professional services thereon.

SECTION 3. The dentist, when applied to for merely advice or temporary relief, by the patient of a reputable practitioner, whose services at that time he is unable to procure, should guard against disparaging the family dentist by hints, inquiries, or any other means calculated to weaken the patient's confidence in him. At the same time the dentist should not, from too high a sense of professional courtesy to his neighboring practitioner, allow the interests of persons so applying for counsel or service to be jeopardized.

SECTION 4. It shall be regarded as unprofessional to warrant operations or work as an inducement to patronage.

Order of Business

1. Call to order.
2. Roll call.
3. Reading of minutes of previous meeting.
4. Applications for membership.
5. Election of members.
6. Reports of committees.
7. Papers and discussions.
8. Unfinished business.
9. New business.
10. Adjournment.
